QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Where the highest court of Delaware, in Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., 457 A.2d 701 (Del. Supr. 1983), plainly "preserved" plaintiffs' "right to challenge the element of fair value" in equity in "any case challenging a cash-out merger, the effective date of which is on or before February 1, 1983," did not the Court of Appeals, in its summary affirmance of the District Court's grant of summary judgment, radically depart from Erie v. Tompkins, in constructing a limitation that said grandfather clause applied only to cases instituted after the 1977 decision in Singer v. Magnavox, 380 A.2d 969 (Del. Supr. 1977) contrary to Weinberger's unambiguous holding, thus nullifying the state created remedy.

2. Did not the federal courts below flagrantly deviate from Erie v. Tompkins by granting summary judgment dismissing plaintiffs' claim under New York law, (Martin Act, Gen. Bus. L. Section 352-c) on the sole "basis" of the Delaware decision in Weinberger, contrary to the substantive law of New York, whereby New York state courts interpret their own Martin Act without regard to Delaware decisions.

PETITION OF WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

The Order of the Court of Appeals, is unreported (A 1).* The order of the Court of Appeals, denying the petition for rehearing, is reported at _____ F.2d _____ (A 19). The Opinion of the District Court is reported at 576 F. Supp. 269 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) (A 4).

JURISDICTION

The Judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on April 13, 1984. A timely petition for rehearing was denied May 25, 1984, and this petition for a Writ of Certiorari was filed within 90 days of that date. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

STATUTE INVOLVED

Involved herein is the New York Martin Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. L. Sec. 352-c (McKinney 1984), set forth in the Appendix hereto.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This action growing out of a short form merger, was commenced on behalf of defendant Kirby Lumber Corporation, a Delaware corporation ("Kirby"),* and as a class action on behalf of its minority stockholders. The original complaint filed in September 1974 alleged violations of Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. Section 78aa), Rule 10b-5 of the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") and a Delaware state claim for breach of fiduciary obligation because the fiduciary forced its minority out at an unconscionable price. By amendment, violation of the New York Martin Act was also alleged.

The underlying facts are not in dispute. Prior to the transaction involved here, Santa Fe Natural Resources, Inc., which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Santa Fe Industries, Inc. ("Santa Fe"), owned 95% of Kirby and 5% was held by public minority shareholders, including the plaintiffs. For the sole purpose of getting rid of the minority interest in Kirby, defendants created Forest Products, Inc. ("FPI"), a Delaware corporation, on July 11, 1974, to effect a statutory merger under the color of the Delaware short former merger statute which authorized effectuation of the merger before notice to and without consent of the minority, and provision for payment in cash as unilaterally fixed by the fiduciary for the minority shares.

On July 31, 1974, defendants caused FPI to be merged into Kirby, cashing out the minority. By letter of August 1, 1974, after the merger had been completed, effective the previous day, the minority stockholders of Kirby were first informed by defendants that their only right was to receive a cash payment of $150 per share or to seek an appraisal under Delaware law for the fair value of those shares.

Prior to the freeze-out merger on July 31, 1974, the following significant facts took place:

(i) Appraisal Associates on February 19, 1974, had submitted to the defendants a written appraisal of the land (exclusive of minerals), timber, buildings and machinery belonging to Kirby as of December 31, 1973, stating its market value to be $320,000,000. The book value of these assets was only $9,000,000. The difference of $311,000,000 was $622 per share over and above the book value of those assets of Kirby.

(ii) By letter of June 24, 1974 Morgan Stanley & Co., with knowledge of that written appraisal, rendered an opinion that the fair market value of the Kirby stock was $125 per share.

(iii) Certain minority stockholders of Kirby, not including plaintiffs herein, sued under Delaware's appraisal statute. The court of last resort in Delaware affirmed an award to the appraisal participants of $254.40 per share plus $99.57 prejudgment interest - a total of $353.97 per share. Bell v. Kirby Lumber Corp., 413 A.2d 137 (Del. Supr. 1980). At the appraisal trial, Kirby's expert, Nichols, valued Kirby's assets at $227,754,000 and after certain adjustments made by the Court appointed appraiser, the Supreme Court of Delaware affirmed the adoption of that asset valuation which amounted to $456 per share;* it also found a value of $120 per share under an earnings approach and assigned a weight of 60% to earnings and 40% to asset value in arriving at an appraised value of $254.40 per share.

*Certain other public stockholders of Kirby have recently moved for summary judgment in a New York State action on the ground that defendants are collaterally estopped on the issue of fair value of assets showing a value of $456 per share.

The above transaction, whereby a fiduciary blatantly overreached its cestuis, in a short form cash-out merger constituted a plain breach of fiduciary duty under Weinberger v. UOP Inc., 457 A.2d 701 (Del. Supr. 1983). Likewise, because of the acts committed in New York, it was a violation of New York's Martin Act (Gen. Bus. L. Section 352-c).

Prior Proceedings

This Court dismissed the federal claim because the fraud alleged was not manipulation or deception within the meaning of Section 10(b). Santa Fe Industries Inc. v. Green, 430 U.S. 462 (1977).

This court stated that "it is entirely appropriate in this instance to relegate respondent (petitioners herein) and others in his situation to whatever remedy is created by state law." 430 U.S. 462, 478 (1977).

Plaintiffs were granted leave to file a second amended complaint limited to state claims grounded upon diversity jurisdiction in light of the Delaware Supreme Court's decision in Singer v. Magnavox Co., 380 A.2d 969 (Del. Supr. 1977), reaffirming the Mayflower doctrine (93 A.2d 107, Del. Ch. 1952) that a stockholder may sue for breach of fiduciary obligation and seek injunctive or monetary relief in equity under Delaware law in the case of a long form cash-out merger, despite the availability of a statutory appraisal.

In August 1979, the Delaware Supreme Court decided Roland International Corp. v. Najjar, 407 A.2d 1032. Roland applied

Singer to a short form freeze-out merger.

The District Court denied defendants' first motion for summary judgment on the basis of Roland. Green v. Santa Fe Industries, Inc., 88 F.R.D. 575, 576 (S.D.N.Y. 1980).

The U.S. District Court in November, 1983 granted defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint on the purported basis but, actually, in complete disregard, of the recent decision by the Delaware Supreme Court in Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., 457 A.2d 701 (Del. Supr. 1983). The District Court failed to carry out this Court's mandate, above, by denying plaintiffs the remedy explicitly granted to them under Delaware law. Weinberger, discussed infra. The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit summarily affirmed, in an unreported opinion, on April 13, 1984. Rehearing was denied May 25, 1984.

Also, the District Court in this case twice denied a motion for class certification under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 and denied a motion to intervene under Fed. R. Civ. P. 24. As a result, certain other shareholders of Kirby started their own action in Federal Court, Loengard v. Santa Fe.

Jurisdiction of the Federal District Court

The basis for federal jurisdiction in the District Court is 28 U.S.C. Section 1332(a)(1): diversity of citizenship.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in summarily affirming the District Court's grant of summary judgment dismissing the complaint, has so far sanctioned a departure from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceeding, as to call for an exercise of this Court's power of supervision. U.S. Sup. Ct. Rule 17, 28 U.S.C.*

* Reference is made to the District Court hereafter since the Court of Appeals summarily affirmed the District Court's decision.

THE FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT'S MODIFICATION AND LIMITATION OF A RECENT UNAMBIGUOUS HOLDING OF THE HIGHEST COURT OF DELAWARE IS A USURPTION OF STATE POWER, CONTRA ERIE V. TOMPKINS

There is no question that Erie v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64 (1938) and its progeny require that the Federal District Court apply the applicable state law, namely Delaware. It is also undisputed that the recent decision by the highest court in Delaware, Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., 457 A.2d 701 (Del. Supr. 1983), controls this claim. See, Vandenbank v. Owens Illinois Co., 311 U.S. 538, 543 (1941).

However, under the guise of interpreting Weinberger, the District Court, "created" new law, in direct contradiction to the unequivocal rule announced in Weinberger. Such a departure from the controlling state law, is a usurption of the state's power, contrary to Erie.

On February 1, 1983, the Delaware Supreme Court in Weinberger, supra, restated the law in Delaware that the majority stockholder breaches his fiduciary obligation by cashing out the minority at an unfair price. 457 A.2d at 711, 712, 715.

The Delaware Supreme Court was determined to give appropriate relief in all cases where a freeze-out had been at an unfair price, i.e., had involved a breach of fiduciary obligation. Id. The Court laid down two methods for effecting the equitable result of giving the frozen out stockholders a fair price for their stock.

The first method* was an expanded appraisal remedy under Delaware's appraisal statute, 8 Del. C. § 262. The Court adopted a > "more liberal, less rigid and stylized, approach to the valuation process than has heretofore been permitted." 457 A.2d at 704.

However, the Delaware Supreme Court refused to apply the appraisal remedy retroactively, recognizing that litigants, including the Weinberger plaintiff, were time barred from seeking appraisal under the appraisal statute, 8 Del. C. §262. Weinberger, 457 A.2d at 704, 714. Thus, the Court set forth an explicit grandfather clause for five categories of cases, where the stockholder's remedy would not be confined to the statutory appraisal remedy, 457 A.2d at 714-715:

> Obviously, there are other litigants, like the plaintiff, who abjured an appraisal and whose rights to challenge the element of fair value must be preserved. Accordingly, the quasi-appraisal remedy we grant the plaintiff here will apply only to: (1) this case; (2) any case now pending on appeal to this Court; (3) any case now pending in the Court of Chancery which has not yet been appealed but which may be eligible for direct appeal to this Court; (4) any case challenging a cash-out merger, the effective date of which is on or before February 1, 1983; and (5) any proposed merger to be presented at a shareholder's meeting, the notification of which is mailed to the stockholders on or before February 23, 1983.
> Thereafter, the provisions of 8 Del. C. Section 262, as herein construed, respecting the scope of an appraisal and the means for perfecting the same, shall govern the financial remedy available to minority shareholders in a cash-out merger.

Since the Kirby cash-out merger occurred in 1974, our case falls squarely within category four (4): cash-out mergers effected on or before February 1, 1983. We also fit squarely within category (3).*

The District Court refused to apply the explicit grandfather clause on grounds that are clearly untenable. The District Court stated that the grandfather clause should be applied only to cases instituted after the Singer v. Magnavox decision, 380 A.2d 969 (Del. Supr. 1977) (A 12-13, A 17). There is absolutely no warrant in Weinberger for this interpretation of the grandfather clause. Weinberger suggests no such cut off date. Weinberger plainly preserves:

* It has long been established law under the supremacy clause that where a general remedy is made available in the state courts, federal courts cannot be excluded from administering the same in their diversity jurisdiction. Ry. Co. v. Whitton's Administrator, 13 Wall (80 U.S.) 270 (1871); Markham v. City of Newport News, 292 F.2d 711 (4th Cir. 1961); 17 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, §4211 "State Attempts to Limit Federal Jurisdiction."

"any case challenging a cash out merger, the effective date of which is on or before February 1, 1983". 457 A.2d at 714-715. Had the Delaware Supreme Court intended to limit the savings clauses to actions instituted after the Singer decision it would have said so; it said nothing of the kind. That Court was not inarticulate; the Weinberger opinion very carefully delineated the types of cases where the equity action would continue, and ours clearly falls within them. Moreover, such an exclusion from the grandfather clause does violence to the policy of the Weinberger decision.

It is basic to the Weinberger plan that no one be defeated because the Delaware Supreme Court there was modifying the procedure for granting an adequate remedy to the frozen-out stockholders. Petitioners herein are "[o]bviously . . . other litigants, like the [Weinberger] plaintiff, who abjured an appraisal and whose rights to challenge the element of fair value must be preserved." 457 A.2d at 714.

The District Court also determined that the plaintiffs did not abjure an appraisal within the language of Weinberger and thus, did not apply the explicit grandfather clause.

That is contrary to this Court's determination in its prior decision, that "Respondents [petitioners herein], minority stockholders of Kirby, objected to the terms of the merger, but did not pursue their appraisal remedy in the Delaware Court of Chancery." (430 U.S. at 466-467).

Defendants agree that "plaintiffs . . . (the 'Green plaintiffs') decided not to seek appraisal . . ." (Defendant's Brief dated August 16, 1984, p. 2, filed in Supreme Court of the State of New York). Petitioners plainly "abjured" an appraisal. That is, they rejected the appraisal remedy as not giving adequate relief. They sent a letter asking for appraisal but expressly reserved the right to withdraw the request; they did withdraw the request; defendants accepted the said withdrawal; they were not included in the appraisal proceeding; they did not receive any proceeds of the appraisal proceeding. Plainly, therefore, plaintiffs' "rights to challenge the element of fair value must be preserved". 457 A.2d at 714.

It is illogical that the federal court denied plaintiffs any relief, under Weinberger. The result of the decisions below is that plaintiffs are being disadvantaged because they were ingenious enough to reject the appraisal remedy, since they recognized, as did the Delaware Supreme Court, that the prior appraisal method of valuation is "clearly outmoded." Weinberger, 457 A.2d at 712.

The Delaware Supreme Court in Weinberger, laid down a second method by stockholders would receive appropriate relief: a continued equity action for rescission. This remedy would continue to be available where the expanded appraisal was not an adequate remedy. In the ordinary case, the expanded appraisal would give full relief making the general equity action unnecessary.

This holding was completely ignored by the District Court. Appraisal is not the sole remedy allowed by Weinberger for a breach of fiduciary obligation through a short form cash-out merger. The Supreme Court of Delaware expressly held as follows, 457 A.2d, at 714:

> While plaintiff's monetary remedy ordinarily should be confined to the more liberalized appraisal proceeding herein established, we do not intend any limitation on the historic powers of the Chancellor to grant such other relief as the facts of a particular case may dictate. The appraisal remedy we approve may not be adequate in certain cases, particularly where fraud, misrepresentation, self-dealing, deliberate waste of corporate assets, or gross and palpable over-reaching are involved. Cole v. National Cash Credit Association, Del. Ch., 156 A. 183, 187 (1931). Under such circumstances, the Chancellor's powers are complete to fashion any form of equitable and monetary relief as may be appropriate, including rescissory damages. Since it is apparent that this long completed transaction is too involved to undo, and in view of the Chancellor's discretion, the > award, if any, should be in the form of monetary damages based upon entire fairness standards, i.e., fair dealing and fair price.

This holding, applies squarely to our case. The complaint, filed September 10, 1974, alleged a self-deal: the majority stockholder fixed the price at which it bought out the minority; that price was so disproportionate to the fair value - $150 per share paid for stock worth at least $772 per share - as to evidence fraud or gross and palpable overreaching; the complaint asked alternatively for rescission or reformation of the merger.

Weinberger holds that such a suit would not be precluded even with respect to new mergers and new cases. In any event, it is clear that even if only money damages are now available, our case, pending when Weinberger was decided and involving a pre-1983 merger, was the very kind of suit Weinberger intended to preserve because it is now too late for plaintiffs to get the advantage of the newly liberalized statutory appraisal.

In an illogical, arbitrary manner, the federal district court carved out an exception to the unambiguous savings clause, denying plaintiffs their state-created remedy. The District Court stated that "plaintiffs would reap a windfall" if the Court applied the grandfather clause in Weinberger (A 13). If the decision below is affirmed, the only party to reap a windfall is the faithless fiduciary defendants. Plaintiffs have never had an opportunity for a "fairness" hearing.

Such gross injustice should not be attributed to the Delaware Supreme Court.

This case clearly would have produced an opposite result in the Delaware courts.* See Guarranty Trust v. York, 326 U.S. 99, 109 (1945).

THE DISTRICT COURT COMMITTED GRAVE ERROR OF LAW IN DENYING PLAINTIFFS' CLAIM UNDER NEW YORK'S MARTIN ACT SOLELY ON THE BASIS OF WEINBERGER, A DELAWARE DECISION WHICH CLEARLY DOES NOT AND COULD NOT BAR A CLAIM UNDER NEW YORK LAW CONTRA ERIE

The District Court denied plaintiffs' New York Martin Act claim, (Gen. Bus. L. Section 352-c) on the "basis" of Weinberger, supra. (A 6-7). This is a patent error of law since the New York State courts would not look to the law of Delaware to decide violations of New York's Martin Act. Erie, supra. No other reason was given for the grant of summary judgment on the Martin Act claim.

The courts below, under the guise of applying state law, have completely disregarded the Delaware Supreme Court's most recent applicable decision and New York's applicable statute. This extreme departure from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceeding, calls for an exercise of this Court's power of supervision.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

MEMORANDUM & ORDER

74 Civ. 3915 (KTD)

(Dated: November 22, 1983)

KEVIN THOMAS DUFFY, D.J.:

This case arises out of a Delaware short-form merger between defendant's wholly-owned subsidiary, formed for the purpose of the merger, and Kirby Lumber Corp. ("Kirby") and the objections voiced by the minority shareholders of Kirby to the merger. The factual background and procedural history of this case are set forth fully in Santa Fe Industries, Inc., et al. v. Green, 430 U.S. 462 (1977); Bell v. Kirby Lumber Corp., 413 A.D.2d 137 (Del. 1980); Green v. Santa Fe Industries, Inc., 88 F.R.D. 575 (S.D.N.Y. 1980), and will not be reiterated herein. Defendants move for summary judgment pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.

In their second amended complaint, the plaintiffs assert two causes of action. The first claim for fraud alleges violation of New York's Martin Act, N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law §§ 339-2, 352-c (McKinney's Supp. 1981-1982), and Delaware's common law. The second cause of action is for breach of a fiduciary obligation. Plaintiffs allege that as part of a fraudulent scheme to lull the minority shareholders of Kirby into believing that an independent appraisal was necessary, defendant Morgan Stanley & Co. ("Morgan Stanley") undervalued the price of the stock at $125.00 per share when it was worth at least $772.00 per share. In addition, plaintiffs contend that the information statement sent to them in 1974 contained several material omissions in violation of the Martin Act. See Second Amended Complaint at 4-6. In the second cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiffs allege that the defendants, as fiduciaries, owed plaintiffs a duty to be fair and honest and to act in good faith. They assert that this duty was breached because the merger had no business purpose and the stock was undervalued by Morgan Stanley. Defendants made an earlier motion for summary judgment which I denied on the basis of the then current Delaware Law. Green v. Santa Fe Industries, 88 F.R.D. 575, 576 (S.D.N.Y. 1980).

Defendants now move for summary judgment on both causes of action on the basis of the recent holding in Weinberger v. UOP, Inc. Defendants argue that Weinberger is binding on all cases sub judice and, therefore, acts as a bar to the plaintiffs' action. For the following reasons, summary judgment is granted in the defendants' favor. Accordingly, it is unnecessary to address the arguments asserted under the Martin Act.

DISCUSSION

The party moving for summary judgment must establish that there is no disputed material fact, and that it is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56; see Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157 (1970). In determining whether an issue remains to be tried, all facts and inferences must be viewed in a light most favorable to the party opposing the motion for summary judgment. United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655 (1962).

In a diversity case, the federal court must apply the substantive law that the state would apply. Erie v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64 (1938). While a case is sub judice, the most recent controlling decisions of the state should be applied. Vandenbank v. Owens-Illinois Co., 311 U.S. 538, 543 (1941). Therefore, I will review briefly the progression of Delaware case law on this issue.

Section 253 of the Delaware Corporation Law permits a parent corporation owning 90% or more of the stock of a subsidiary to merge with the subsidiary and make cash payments to the minority shareholders. Those shareholders dissatisfied with the offered price must make a written demand for appraisal in the Delaware Court of Chancery within 120 days of the effective date of the merger. See Del. Code Ann. Title 8, 3262 (Supp. 1982). In 1974, at the time this action was commenced, the law in Delaware was that appraisal was an exclusive remedy.

In Stauffer v. Standard Brands, Inc., 187 A.2d 78, 80 (1962), the court dismissed an action for fraud and stated that "the very purpose of the statute is to provide the parent corporation with a means of eliminating the minority shareholder's interest in the enterprise." More than five years after the commencement of Green, the Delaware Supreme Court overruled Stauffer and held that a valid "corporate purpose" was required for a short-form merger, and that appraisal rights were not an exclusive remedy. Roland International Corp. v. Najjar, 407 A.2d 1032, 1036 (Del. 1979) (extending the holding in Singer v. Magnavox Co., 380 A.2d 969 (Del. 1977), which had allowed other remedies to shareholders involved in an ordinary merger). In Roland, the court held that a merger effected for no other purpose than to eliminate public shareholders may give rise to causes of action other than for appraisal, including a breach of fiduciary duty claim. Id. Defendants' prior summary judgment motion was denied on the basis of Roland.

Recently, however, in Weinberger v. UOP, Inc., the Delaware Supreme Court returned to the Stauffer rule and held that no corporate purpose is required under Delaware's short-form merger statute, and that minority shareholders are limited to an appraisal remedy. 457 A.2d 701, 715 (Del. 1983). Although Weinberger disallowed minority shareholders any relief outside that provided by the Delaware short-form merger statute, it also explicitly limited the retroactive effect of the decision. The Weinberger court stated:

> Obviously, there are other litigants, like the plaintiff, who abjured an appraisal and whose rights to challenge the element of fair value must be preserved. Accordingly, the quasi-appraisal remedy here will apply only to: ...(4) any case challenging a cash-out merger, the effective date of which is on or before February 1, 1983.

457 A.2d at 714. Thus, the court permitted the minority shareholders in Weinberger, and plaintiffs in other cases similarly situated, to seek relief other than appraisal, but held that in the future appraisal rights would be an exclusive remedy. Id. at 715.

Defendants argue that the Weinberger court, in limiting its holding retroactively, intended to assist those plaintiffs who brought an action between Singer, decided in 1977, and Weinberger. Thus, defendants contend that the Green plaintiffs have no excuse for not pursuing an appraisal remedy because their action was instituted at a time when Singer had not yet been decided, and therefore plaintiffs could not possibly have relied on Singer. Defendants' argument is persuasive. Although the Weinberger court, appeared to limit the reach of its holding to all mergers effected before 1983, the policy considerations behind the court's decision to allow certain plaintiffs to continue to seek remedies other than appraisal would not be promoted by a blind application of the court's provision for retroactive relief. Further, plaintiffs would reap a windfall that the Delaware Supreme Court could not have intended.

In Weinberger, the court held that it was "return[ing] to the well established principles of Stauffer v. Standard Brands, Inc., 187 A.2d 78 (Del. 1962) and Greene & Co. v. Schenley Industries, Inc., 281 A.2d 30 (Del. Ch. 1971), mandating a stockholder's recourse to the basic remedy of appraisal." The claim in Stauffer was that the cash offered to the minority shareholders was so inadequate that it constituted constructive fraud. 187 A.2d at 80. The Stauffer court reasoned that although an "ever-present power of equity to deal with illegality or fraud" is vested in the court, where the dispute is over the value of the stock, "there is no remedy except appraisal." Id.

In Greene, which was an action for an order enjoining the proposed merger between the parent and subsidiary, the court held:

> [U]nless the fair value of Schenley stock is so much greater than the total amount offered, or that plaintiffs and other minority stockholders are being otherwise deprived of clear rights or otherwise so taken advantage of by those charged with a fiduciary duty towards them as to constitute a form of constructive fraud, or the like, then it would appear that the parties are merely in dispute as to value, for which an appraisal should be adequate.

281 A.2d at 33. This is the situation here. Plaintiffs are complaining that the stock was undervalued by Morgan Stanley.[1/]

The reasoning employed in Greene and Stauffer are applicable in this case. In addition, for the reasons that follow the Weinberger court's holding on the retroactive application of its decision will not be utilized under the facts and circumstances of this case.

First, at the time that the plaintiffs instituted their action in 1974, appraisal was the only remedy available to dissatisfied minority shareholders of a merged corporation after a short-form merger was perfected. See Stauffer v. Standard Brands, Inc., 187 A.2d 78 (Del. 1962). On August 21,1974, the plaintiffs filed a petition in the Delaware Court of Chancery for appraisal but withdrew that petition. The day after the withdrawal, the plaintiffs commenced an action in federal court alleging violations of the federal securities laws. See Santa Fe Industries, Inc. v. Green, 430 U.S. 462, 467 n.4 (1976). Thus, plaintiffs -- to use the language of the Weinberger court-- did not "abjure an appraisal." They sought appraisal and made a conscious tactical decision to withdraw their petition. Their "rights to challenge the element of fair value" did not have to be preserved because they had the opportunity to and did, in fact, seek appraisal.

Second, the Delaware Supreme Court in Weinberger, provided for prospective application of its holding on appraisal exclusivity because litigants who instituted actions after Singer was decided could be said to have relied on Singer in waiving their right to an appraisal. Here, plaintiffs could not be said to have relied on Singer. Their action was commenced in 1974 when appraisal was the exclusive remedy and three years before Singer was decided. Thus, the Green plaintiffs did not rely on Singer when they withdrew their petition for appraisal.

Accordingly, summary judgment is granted in favor of the defendants.

SO ORDERED.

FOOTNOTE

1. Bell V. Kirby Lumber Corp., 413 A.2d 137 (Del. 1980), involved the Kirby shareholders who invoked the appraisal remedy. The court held that the "Morgan Stanley appraisal is the product of an orderly and logical deductive process in accordance with the approved methodology properly accepted by the Appraiser and the Vice-Chancellor." Id. at 147 (citations omitted). In addition, the Delaware Supreme Court did not suggest that any fraud of overreaching occurred in connection with the 1974 short-form merger. Thus, even if Stauffer were inapplicable here, it is unlikely that the facts would support an allegation of constructive fraud based on a breach of a fiduciary duty.
